

ABSTRACT

A unique shock-absorbing bumper device for use in absorbing collision energy in all bumper assembly systems, and more specifically automobiles. A simple efficient structure is designed for ease of installation and removal after impact, and to provide high performance in absorbing colliding energy, which prevents a driver and passengers from severe injury caused by a car colliding with an object. This system may be used in car doors for absorbing side impacts.